Changing Faces is a program designed to bring together women from the United States and the Asia Pacific region to participate in dialogue on leadership and issues specific to women in leadership around the region. The theme of the 2007 program is "Women and Peacebuilding in Asia, the Pacific, and the United States." The program seeks professional women, in both the public and private sectors, at lower and middle level positions of leadership from around the United States and the Asia Pacific region. Women active in community development, peacebuilding in post-conflict situations, or inter-communal/inter-religious dialogue efforts are welcome to apply.

The program consists of three phases of participation:

- |                         |   |
|-------------------------|---|
| Pre-arrival      | Each participant will be asked to identify a priority issue, either for her organization or her community, and to outline ways in which she sees herself exercising leadership to address the issue. Participants will engage in online dialogue through the program website.   |
| Honolulu Seminar | Workshops will cover topics including communication, team-building, organizational planning, and models of leadership in differing cultural contexts. In addition, community resource persons and local site visits will highlight community building and dialogue activities taking place in the culturally and ethnically diverse state of Hawai'i. As the capstone of the seminar participants will make presentations on their priority issues and individual action plans. |
| Follow-up        | Participants will refine their action plans, maintain regular contact with program staff and fellow participants, and provide updates on action plan progress via an e-mail listserve and program website. Participants will be required to submit a formal progress report in April 2008.  |
